Making a More Competitive Application

- Dedicate time to this. A well-polished Gilman Application should take some time and effort to draft, edit, review, and finalize. Don't write the essays online at the last minute.
- Hook the reader from the beginning. Scholarship reviewers read hundreds of essays from students who are all writing about study abroad. Catch their attention with an interesting, short anecdote or quote, or start with information about why you are unique. Align your essays, and think of them as one long argument. Be careful about being repetitive across the three essays.
- Revise before you submit: Have someone look over your essays to check spelling and grammar. Thoroughly address all questions asked. Don't let easily fixed spelling and grammar mistakes distract from the content of your writing
- Review the Gilman website: Gilman provides tips on the Gilman Essay and they even provide Videos (See the Composing Competitive Essays video and refer especially to minutes 3:08-6:19).

Tips for the Statement of Purpose Essay

- Why have you chosen this study abroad program over all others? Make a clear case for how/why your program is relevant to your major, career goals, future plans or all of the above. Think long term. How will this program help you reach graduation and how will it improve your life even after graduation?
- Talk about your unique identity and the strengths it brings. One of the goals of Gilman is to broaden study abroad participation, particularly for students who have been historically underrepresented in education abroad. This is including but not limited to, first-generation college students, students in STEM fields, racial and ethnic minority students, veterans, and students with disabilities. Explore your own identity. What is unique about you as a person? Are you involved with something on campus or in your community? Do you have a unique interest or hobby? What have you learned because of your identity that can be an asset to your study abroad program?
- Talk about your academics. Why did you chose the major you chose? Is your GPA below a 3.0? If so, explain why. What courses do you hope to take on your education abroad program and how do those courses align with your academic goals?
- If you are studying in a traditional destination (Western Europe, Australia, New Zealand), explain in detail why you selected your program (from an academic or career-planning perspective). Remember the goals of the Gilman and make sure your reasons for choosing this location are objectively aligned with those goals.

Tips for the Community Impact Essay

- The Gilman organization believes that study abroad is a form of diplomacy. Through the Gilman scholarship, the U.S. Department of State hopes to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries by means of educational and cultural exchange.
- Gilman scholars are expected to, learn about their host cultures, share what it means to be an American and build meaningful relationships through that learning and sharing. In this essay you need to make a case for how you will do this abroad.
- How does your identity showcase the diversity of values, beliefs, and opinions in the U.S.? You may be the first person from your background that somebody in your host country has ever met. How can you leverage your identity to make connections with people abroad?
- Do some research. What are some of the issues your host country is working through? How do they relate to the issues in your own community? How can you make a positive impact in your host country? This could be through volunteer work, interning, or simply immersing yourself completely.

Tips for the Follow-on Service Project

- Read the example projects completed by Gilman Alumni. Most of them are outreach-oriented, which is essentially what Gilman is asking for. The purpose of the project is to promote both study abroad and the Gilman scholarship.
- When describing your follow-on project, consider partnering with clubs or organizations with which you are already involved. Consider creative uses of technology, media, photography, etc.
- Describe what impact the project will have on your audience. What is your intended outcome with the audience?
